

FACULTY COUNCIL IN HEAT

by Peter Bennett

Peter Bennett was a member of Faculty Council's Tenure and Promotions Committee last year.

Glendon's Faculty Council has in the past, been assumed to be the supreme academic decision-making body for Glendon College. What was passed by Faculty Council and its committees was generally rubber-stamped by the Senate of York University. Recent events however, suggest that our much vaunted autonomy may be threatened and therefore a serious reevaluation of the council's role in the light of these events would be in order.

Our Faculty Council has nine standing committees: Policy and Planning; Curriculum; Academic Standards; Bilingualism; Bookstore; Library; Minor Research Grants; Petitions; and Tenure and Promotions. Every department has some similar committees or have representatives sitting on standing committees which have six (or four) voting members comprised of an equal number of students and faculty members.

The threat to Glendon's academic "autonomy" lies in two not dissimilar areas:

the cutbacks imposed by the government of Bill Davis and the area of tenure and promotions.

What the government gives the universities does not match the increase in costs imposed by inflation. This means that no expansion of facilities can take place. Faculty-student ratios have to be increased; new faculty cannot be hired; non-classroom academic services such as library budgets, audio-visual resources, and even services like pre-registration have to be cut back or eliminated. Because Glendon has no effective voice in the formulation of York's budget, we have to fight like crazy to maintain our budget, let alone increase it to maintain existing levels of service. This means that the question of economics can become an overriding concern in the area of hiring, tenure and promotion. Can we afford this person? Why not refuse this person tenure and hire by contract only on a seasonal basis? In other words, what was strictly an academic procedure based on qualifications, professional contribution, strengths as a teacher, etc. becomes a matter of economics. Since on two levels, that of the Principal and that of the President, there is a dual function as both chief budget officer and academic dean; there is a real threat to academic integrity which the faculty council may be powerless to arrest.

Although there is evidence that on one level questions of academics and economics were confused, the case of the Sociology department at Glendon involves a threat to Glendon's academic autonomy in another way.

Early last year, the Glendon committee on tenure and promotions was faced with the files of eight and one-half members of the sociology department. The committee had to weigh a number of factors: most were young, without Ph.D's, Canadian and hired at a time when there was a real shortage of Canadian sociologists. Many were doing their doctorates in an unstable atmosphere, the U of T. After about two months of very exhausting analysis the committee decided to approve most of the applications with a few exceptions. The files went on to the Principal and he too had great difficulty, but finally approved most of the applications with different exceptions than those of the college committee. The files moved on to the Senate committee which completely disregarded the advice of the chairman Jean Burnet; the departmental committee; the college committee; and the college Principal: and delayed or refused all of the applications. Upon appeal, one of the decisions has been changed, but as of this writing, the careers of seven and one-half people are hanging in the air. Two most eminent Canadian sociologists (I don't use the words-tightly) Professors Burnet and Wilmott, who built that department have received rude slaps in the face. The future of the sociology department (of only eleven and one-half people) is very much in doubt, as is Glendon's "academic autonomy". It's a situation which bears watching. After all, that's what we're here for, isn't it? Academics?

G.C.S.U. SUMMER PASTIMES

by Larry Guimond

Student government moves slowly at its peak but the summertime is for most a time for jobs and vacations rather than setting up plans for the following year. Glendon's new council under President Mike Drache easily slips into the category of basic non-activity. The flurry of new plans and programmes that followed the election of the council into office, were laid aside for the summer.

Two members of the council, Kathi Fort and Nancy Brown deserve special recognition for their hard work over the summer. They appear to be responsible for the majority of the work done since the Council took office in early April. However, the nature of the work, aside from the project of the handbook is somewhat hard to determine. From the records and minutes of the meetings, their intentions seem to be good but evidence of completed motions escapes the eyes of most people. A great process of creating tasks and never completing them. This attitude could be accounted for by the number of tasks that the Council set out to complete and by a general sense of apathy among certain members of the Council.

One of the first acts of the Council was to reject the results of the by-election held close to the end of last year. The issues voted upon were: referendums for Pro Tem, the Café, and Radio Glendon. Along with these was a by-election to fill some vacant positions on C.O.S.A., an advisory body to the Principal of the College. Neither the Council nor the organizations involved have made any public statements as to what they intend to do. According to Student Council members, hopefully, this can be settled early in the year so that everything can proceed smoothly.

An interesting feature of the summer meetings was the censure of Mike Drache: the withdrawing of his salary for the month of June. The Council argued that he should not receive his monthly three hundred dollars because during the time in question he had done little to deserve the amount. However, since that time he has been showing considerably more effort and his salary was reinstated.

In the spring the rumour existed that Drache was to be impeached. This appears to have been kept around the campus during the summer and only the proceedings of September will indicate whether or not it is fact or fiction.

Student Council this year faces what they have termed "the year of cutbacks" and anyone having financial dealings with them would be well advised to complete them as early as possible. For anyone who has suggestions or help to offer the Council, it would be readily accepted. As for the rest of us, we will just sit back and watch.

Who's who?

FREE THE PEOPLE

by Mike Drache

Orientation

In the past orientation has attempted to please all and satisfy none. Generally spending too much money on "jock" type events, it resembled a fraternity reunion, in style and taste. This year, it is more subdued but the loud music and free beer exists.

A new twist this year will be a mini-film festival on Sat. nite and Sunday which should be a gas! Perhaps students are too jaded or blasé to get into it, after all going back to school is hardly the most exciting time in your life or the most boring. Glendon offers an ivory tower view of society, insular and conservative it has changed little and it is doubtful if it is capable of transforming itself into a semi-hip ivy-league or a rambling multiversity. Hopefully, Glendon may rediscover it's potential and become a center for cultural and political activity. The seventies have shown a concern for a return to solid creative activities, a penchant for the tangible and easily assumed energy with a view for the future. It is difficult to fit orientation into such a perspective however the show must go on.

Free the People

professionals generally becoming thoroughly bourgeois thus following in dad's footsteps.

Now, thanks to the vicissitudes of our history this ultimate destiny has become somewhat disrupted. This assembly-line is producing but the rulers aren't buying. Some predict that this may lead to meritocracy and high tuition at all schools, it is a remarkable vision.

However, the question of immediacy remains. Perhaps Glendon should become more involved with the community rather than isolated from it. This is why we are embarking on a series of new projects at the school; day-care, tenants-unions, exchange programs with other schools and hopefully some major conferences dealing with major areas of concern facing the Canadian nation. Your ideas are invited and help in any of these things is welcome. Glendon is only as good as the community it serves. Free the people.

A Plan for the Future

It is my hope that Glendon can become a more creative institution or it will atrophy and collapse. The function of the university is to produce managers, functionaries, technocrats and rulers. Most

EDITORIAL

It's a new year and there are a lot of new faces on campus that most students -- new and returning -- may have never seen. Starting from the top, there is Dr. David McQueen, our new principal who now is a permanent resident of Glendon. There is also Ron Sabourin, our new Dean of Students -- see below for our inside scoop! John Richmond has now taken over the upstairs physical plant and Jindra Rutherford has a new position, that of Information Officer. We even have a new kitchen crew, to tempt and tantalize our taste buds! New Dons are now settled into residence. We have found them to be, like all these other new people, friendly, helpful, and very approachable. It should be a pleasure for students to have dealings with them during this year. There are also the many familiar faces in every office on campus, and these people can be counted on, as always.

Since we are new to a lot of you -- at least as editors -- we would like to take this opportunity to explain our editorial policy. As far as we are concerned, the editorial is the column in each paper where we can air our own personal opinions or concerns. If the occasion for comment presents itself elsewhere, it will appear as an editor's note.

Afin de représenter la communauté entière de Glendon, nous aimerions inclure des articles et des annonces en français. Nous ne voulons pas publier en français seulement pour donner l'impression que c'est un journal bilingue. Si des articles sont soumis en français, on va sûrement les publier.

Nous n'allons pas remplir le journal avec des traductions redondantes des articles anglais. Mais des annonces importantes vont être traduites.

The preceding was an announcement explaining that we are not including french articles as a token gesture. Only important announcements will be translated into both languages.

Now a few editorial comments. These are some questions for which we don't, as yet, have an answer. Why did the Glendon information package take so long to reach the students? We know the mails are slow, but... Does anyone know why there was no pre-registration? Considering that the food prices are even higher. How is $460 of scrip last until April? Last but not least, how is it that at the first Student Council meeting of the fall there was not a quorum and no business was able to be transacted?

In closing, remember -- there are lots of things to see, hear, do, (and read!) at Glendon if you're willing to get involved.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT - OUR NEW DEAN

Ron Sabourin, Glendon's new Dean of Students, being interviewed by Pro Tem Staff.

Q. Could you give a brief outline of what you feel the job of Dean is as Glendon sees it?

R. As Glendon sees it, it is probably difficult to answer. Basically you're in charge of extra curricular activities. There is overlap with the Student Union and technically, within the University regulations, the Dean is the one who maintains contact with the Student Union and whatever student activities there does exist. My personal view on that is that students are of an age when they can make a lot of their own decisions, maybe a lot of their own errors but they should be allowed to make them and learn from them. In a way, I'm a resource person who has a number of facilities at his disposal, that he may put at the use of the students. The students have a number of facilities themselves and for the better reputation of the College and the University, it is said that the Dean should know what is going on -- which can be interpreted in different ways. I tend to let them do their own business, but on the other hand if there does arise some kind of difficulties or squabbles, or if they just want information, the use of my services, or advice, I'm available.

Overall, there is a part, so-called disciplinary or keeping good order in the place, which the students can do themselves, but in the final instance, I am the one who handles that. But that's only a minor part.

I suppose you could say that the Dean of Students job is one that is caught between two levels: he is in between the Administration, by being a part of the Administration, and also working closely with the students, seeing their points of view and being able to defend and present the points of view of the students to the Administration. Also vice versa, he presents the points of view of the Administration to the students, which means he gets hell from both sides! That's what I call an in-between position, acting as a liaison between the two.

Q. Last year you said in an interview about student affairs, that you would rather serve as an advisor than as a participant.

R. Yes, I'm not sure I phrased it exactly like that but it's quite possible. What I meant by that, and I still hold this opinion, is that I don't want to be the one who organizes the student activities. If there are no students around who want a certain activity, I'm certainly not going to start it up for them. I prefer that the initiative come from the students, that if they need advice or financial backing, or maybe they need certain facilities from the University, then I'd act as an advisor and in that sense I might be active by facilitating a situation. But basically I don't want to start off the activities for the students. I prefer that they do that themselves. There is a small snag though, that doesn't make it a pure policy -- I do have budgets. Let's consider classical music, I've got a budget for classical music. Suppose that nobody wants to hear classical music this year. I've got a budget, but if I don't use it this year, I run the risk of losing it for the next year when maybe some students would like some. So I do have to see if I can create, or bring out the interests, perhaps latent, in some students...In that sense it's not a pure policy of strictly being advisor and being available. I am also ferreting out possible interests.

Q. Last year you mentioned that you wanted to encourage students to be off campus whenever possible. Is this going to be taking away from events on campus?

R. Well, I take it this way: I've been on campus six years, three of them as a Don, three of them out, and you find that if a student stays strictly on campus, and there are activities there, he says, "Aw well, I'll go to the next one." or "I'm getting fed up with this place and I hate the pub. I've seen it too often." Whereas if he goes off campus, goes and sees an activity, he might get interested in something different. Then when that type of activity comes on campus, he'll say "Well, let's go and see what it looks like." There is variety and in that sense you might create more interest in campus activity, instead of having them apathetic or phlegmatic.

Q. Do you think then that the school does enough to inform students as to activities that happen in the city and around the city?

R. Well, there has been that information, though I suppose we could say there's not enough. But that is what the Dean's Office should do -- keep informed of outside activities. I believe that when we get information for activities going on off campus, we should advertise them; we should let that information circulate within the College; we should facilitate the possibilities of students going off campus. The other thing I also indicated in the interview, and I forget if it was printed or not, was that there are certain plays going on, or shows, and sometimes there are leftover tickets, so I will try to see if I can get some. I'd say, "Look, you haven't sold these tickets, so why don't you try and give me some at a reduced price and I'll spread them around campus." In a sense, this place is a golden cage. It is unfortunate, because if you want to stay here you have enough to be able to subsist and exist. But to really have a full life, at times it's good to get off campus.

Q. Let's talk now about the relationship between Dons and the Dean. Could you give a brief explanation of that for the new students at Glendon?

R. I've tried to hire the Dons so that they would be responsible people whom I could trust and give enough leeway to. I expect that they will respect confidences that they receive from students, I expect that they'll be able to take some initiative; I expect that they'll be different one from another, and that overall, from the Dons I've hired...there is enough variety of them that students can have their pick of people.

What I expect of them, basically, is not to leave me out on a limb. By that I mean that if they have information that might affect students or the college, I should be kept informed. There's a very thin line between respecting confidence and keeping the Dean informed. It might mean saying "Be aware of this" but without specifying which students are involved and respecting a confidence. It might mean that the Don will recommend to the student that he talk to the Dean but will maintain the confidence. It's very touchy because the Don is sort of a jack-of-all trades but master of none. I don't want the Don to be a specialist. He's not a psychiatrist he is not a consellor, he's not a doctor he's not a professional advisor and quite hopefully, not in his profession totally yet. So he still has a few horizons outside of his profession. That's what I want my Dons to be. There are other specialized personnel on campus that can handle different situations that are better equipped for it and I want those people to handle these situations. The Don is certainly an older person; he might have a little more experience and he's there to be partly with the students and partly to act differently from the students.

Q: What about your relationship to senior day students?

R: Basically the Dean of Students is Dean for all students not just resident students. The resident students, being on campus more often, tend to be a little more active in different activities on campus, so you get to see more resident students. To the day students, in any type of situation the Dean is just as much available, is as much at their services, and is as much there for them as for the resident students.

There is no distinction at that level. One of the things you have to keep in mind is that the day student, by living off campus, has other centres of interest than strictly the college. So it's perfectly understandable that he doesn't spend as much time on campus, that he might not have as many interests here, and that he might be sort of pulled between his interests on campus, his classes, and his interests off campus and maybe between his friends or his family.

Q: It seems that you have the case of the students on campus, heavily involved in activities here, who don't get off campus enough, and the day students who have many activities outside but who don't get involved in student activities on campus.

R: I find it difficult to think about that in a vacuum when there are no students around and you can't get them to participate. If I follow my original idea of having the students develop activities I should make them aware of what facilities are here so that they can do that. There's one thing you have to keep in mind, that any type of policy you might establish to try and get a better integration, a better mix of both of them, will run counter to their own individual needs. We still live in a democracy in a supposedly capitalistic system, where people are allowed their individual orientation and they don't have to be regrouped. Now we have to be careful also that some resident students are not at all interested in what goes on on campus and they go off campus regularly.

Through the plays a number of day students are involved, also through the sports, through the cultural affairs, the major plays, the Christmas banquet, the day students are involved. Whether they want to take on specific responsibilities, that is another problem.

We do need a mix of that... We need to have more day students to get their point of view their interaction and more resident students off-campus.

Q: What about the situation of bilingualism on-campus. How do you feel about that?

R: You must remember the background, that we're in Toronto and not in Montreal or with a fair population of French people. Services are in English even if there are a few French services in the government. Glendon, by having 10 or 15% of its population being French, will have basic services in French that are available to francophone students as well as anglophone students. As it is now, I think we're coming along very well with the basic services in French. I have two Dons who are basically unilingual English, the other ones are bilingual to varying degrees but enough to be able to understand problems, or at least to refer them elsewhere if serious.

As for my staff, it's bilingual. As far as the activities that we have planned: well we do have a certain budget for French shows (to which all English are invited) We do have money for French plays. But if you keep in mind that 80% of the people on campus are anglophones, you're bound to have more English activities than French.

There is a sufficient number of francophones now on campus that they can form their own gang if you want to call it that, and that tends to form because they're learning English and it's tiring learning another language and having to speak slowly.

Q: Do you think we've reached the point now where we can start discriminating with our students - saying this is a bilingual college let's try and have a greater percentage of the population French?

R: Yes - that is something we try and do. If you remember the regulations the bilingual students are the first ones to be accepted, then the unilinguals to complement our enrollment. So we have to first of all choose amongst the people that do apply to Glendon and if we happen to have many more unilinguals, then we're stuck. So it reverts to the problem of publicity and getting the program known. There we're having some success, but it's a long battle because a lot of people figure that it's a bilingual college and you've got to be fluent in French before you can come in and that's really not true. And for somebody who wishes to learn French we have all the facilities to allow them to start from zero and build up (which a lot of students don't know) and we fit them in according to their capacities. But there's still an image that you need to be fluent in French to be in the unilingual stream. And I can still remember the first students we had in the unilingual stream. I was teaching with Michael Horn, it was a unilingual requirement. We had a hundred and fifty students in the class for the unilingual requirement and half the students could understand me when I was quoting something in French. But they were just too scared to try out the French program because they wanted good grades or they felt it was too difficult. So they came in the unilingual stream to be in contact with French people but at the same time not to have the hardship of learning the French language; they had enough basics of it, plus they were fed up with high school French. So amongst the unilingual students they are more in the right spirit. Others just pick this place because it is close by, it is beautiful... we need to work on that and we need to allow better integration between French and English students which is why I think for example, in theatre we can have more anglophones participating in French theatre and there is a number of them that wish to do so and a number of francophones would benefit from participating in English theatre. That has happened by the way, it is not something new, it has happened quite often before. Some of the staff - background staff you don't know about that are francophone work on that and work quite a lot. And on background stage of French plays you had anglophones doing a lot of the work, and in some plays anglophones were playing roles in French, which is excellent and I hope to encourage it. But that again depends partly on their interest.

Q: It has been said that higher education is a necessity for the maintenance of our society and in that sense the student should be considered an active part of society with the same benefits as other people working, that leads to a salary for students - I think we are far away from that in Ontario but it also implies that the facilities put at the students disposal should be the right tools, the right elements so that he can carry out his work and should be within his means. Last year you said you would support the student council if it were to object to fee increases. It seems to me that without the fee increase the students will lose.

R: On that, I also indicated that unfortunately with the university's financial situation, we are in a bind because the residences and food services have to be self-sufficient financially and they have to break even. The university does subsidize some of it through its facilities. What we can do at this stage is see that the students get the best service for their money and that the money component try to be within their means.

We can say O.K. there is a higher cost, as there is now, we also have to see how we can balance out services and costs. If we figure that to maintain a certain standard of service, we have to increase fees by $500.00 we have to say - can we do with less. These figures do have to compare with reality - we have to start with the problems we are facing, the difficulties with the university and unfortunately, the university is going to be in a tough position for a number of years. Unless we get a change of government - although it wouldn't seem that the opposition party is going to do much better.

Q: Do you think that the post-secondary educational system has expanded to the point where we're simply offering quantity rather than quality?

R: We have expanded to that level when the Ontario government expanded the university system to try and get regional universities. that is -- universities in different regions, finding out that we were doubling our facilities and sacrificing quality to offer services there have now been a number of commissions offered on the universities. With the financing system that the Ontario Government has installed, where a graduate student is worth 5 BIU's and a PHD student is worth 6, it was very good for a university to establish a lot of PHD programs even if they didn't exactly have the facilities to get extra income and sort of squeeze some of that money for administration or for undergraduate studies. Maybe we could have a better quality teaching if we had a different financing system

Q: Haven't you made it so easy to get in, and the grading systems lax, that people can drink beer and have a four year holiday?

R: I suppose that's the general image, and probably for some students it's still there, it's a backlash, the same as the people who and now in charge of the Opportunities for Youth program are really ripping off the government, whereas they might be doing a very excellent job, for example the Horizon and LIP programs. In a time of difficulty in a society, when you're running into problems, you're looking for a scapegoat, anyone who seems to be having an easier time than you, is possibly earmarked for execution... You're in a losing battle when you're facing a very organized structure such as a university structure...

Q: That system's been pretty good to us so far as expanding....

R: It has because it served the purposes of whoever was expanding, and now that it doesn't serve the purpose (and I'm referring to Bill Davis if you care to print it!) they're cutting down on it.

Q: Do you have any major changes in mind?

R: Basically, I don't have any big changes in mind in the sense of turning some things upside-down. Some of the changes have been brought in that I would have brought in had I BEEN Dean the year before. ...Instead of actively taking part in many committees, I'd like to be an ex-officio member of them, not a voting member.... I think that's to my advantage and I think it's to the student's advantage. That's the position I've taken. As far as the running of this office, a lot of it is fairly routine, and a time-consuming activity of this office is hearing student's complaints.

Q: What are your office hours for students?

R: I won't be available when I'm teaching, and I'll take a day for my own work. After that you're welcome to see me when I'm here. I'll take appointments as they come. Ask me anything -- if I can do it, then I will.

DOONESBURY

ELECTION TIMING

OTTAWA (CUP)--- The timing of Ontario's election has turned students' efforts to oust the Davis government into a mad scramble for voter enumeration. The September 18 polling date - shortly after fall classes begin - will mean that most students will not be enumerated in their university ridings.

Student organizers expected that the provincial enumeration, which occurred between August 20 - 23, would catch most students in transit from their homes to universities across the province.

The Ontario Federation of Students (OFS) has demanded that the Province launch a major publicity campaign aimed at informing students of enumeration procedures.

"Most students will be in transit between their summer place of residence and their university or college town at the beginning of September," states an OFS press release. "The complexities of enumeration and proxy voting mean students will be forgotten at the polls."

"The choice of the September 18 date could be construed as a deliberate attempt to lessen the impact of the student vote in the election," the OFS says. "This is particularly disturbing at a time of grave concern for the future of post-secondary education in the province. Students, as a group, must have the opportunity to vote."

OFS is informing student councils of the enumeration procedures. But the timing of the enumeration could mean that any possible bloc student vote will be lost among the various ridings.

Students may apply to have the riding in which they were enumerated changed.

The only special procedure for enumeration of students as yet announced is the setting up of tables in residences. The "special arrangements" were outlined in an August 13 memorandum from Chief Electoral Officer Roderick Lewis to all provincial returning officers.

"It is often difficult to find them (students) in their rooms at a convenient time," Lewis says, "so that if arrangements are made to have the enumerators set up a desk in a central point and post notices as to when they will be available there, it would convenience both the enumerators and the students."

At McMaster University in Hamilton, students are being enumerated in the registration line. But the solution does not seem to have been applied to other universities.

The question of student voting is "a very difficult problem," said Lewis in an interview. But remedies exist to ensure that all eligible students cast their ballots, he said.

Students must visit their local district Returning Office in order to be enumerated, or to change the riding in which they were enumerated. At some universities, such as Trent, students' unions are conducting publicity programs to inform students of the procedures.

Meanwhile, plans by student councils for candidates forums and information campaigns on financial cutbacks in education spending and other issues are up in the air.

"I'd like to see some of the candidates come on campus," was the reaction of Western's VP-External Marg O'Grady. "But I can't see that it would be beneficial now. Orientation week is not a time to be political and have any hope of reaching people."

Help! Wanted

Have you ever wondered what goes on behind the door marked PRO TEM in Glendon Hall, or marvelled at the symphony of tapping, buzzing, laughing, or even moaning? Come on in and find out!

PRO TEM is Glendon's newspaper, and for it to serve a useful purpose in the community, we need constructive criticism, and interesting, informative, or inflaming articles about anything that concerns you as a member of this community. As well as these facets of newspaper publishing, we also need HELP! All those skilled (or unskilled -- we will train!) proofreaders, writers, reporters, layout artists, cartoonists and especially typists, will be greeted with open arms by the Editors and Staff of PRO TEM. It's a lot of fun and satisfaction, and you can make a lot of good friends too. (Typists can even make a bit of money!)

There is always someone in the office on Mondays and Tuesdays, so if you're curious and willing to help, just walk in, introduce yourselves, and voilà -- you're a member of PRO TEM!

On a sûr tout grand besoin d'avoir plus de participation francophone. Il est nécessaire que vous participez afin de représenter la partie francophone de la communauté Glendon.

Si vous avez un point de vu sur n'importe quel sujet qui vous intéresse, écrire une article. Même si vous n'avez pas d'expérience journalistique, vous pouvez au moins nous aider en corrigeant tous les articles soumis en français.

Nota Bene; All articles should and MUST be submitted at the latest on Monday morning (Sunday night would be appreciated though) as the paper goes to the printers on Tuesday, and the PRO TEM Staff doesn't want to work all through Monday night!

Tout article DOIT être soumis au plus tard lundi soir -- les membres de PRO TEM ne veulent pas crêver lundi soir!

Last Chance..

...to make sure qualified voters have been correctly included on the Ontario list of voters.

Revision of the Ontario list of voters for changes and additions ends in the Returning Office, Wednesday, September 10 at 9:00 p.m. EDT.

If you have not been enumerated, or you have found your name has been omitted from the list of voters, or there is an error on it, contact the Returning Officer of your Electoral District.

If you live in a rural area, and are qualified to vote, it's much easier if your name is on the list of voters. And there's still time to get on that list. However, qualified rural voters, not on the list by Election Day, may still vote by having a friend or neighbour on the same list "vouch" for them on oath.

Remember, it's your last chance to make sure you are included on the list of voters.

Any voters making a bona fide change of residence from one Electoral District to another may apply to the returning officer in the electoral district to which they have moved, to have their names transferred to that list. (Under section 29 of the Election Act).

ORIENTATION 75

QU'EST-CE QUI SE PASSE?

par Daniel Bélair -- Vice Président aux Affaires Sociales

C'est au début du mois de mai que les plans pour la semaine d'orientation débutèrent.

Nous avons longment réfléchi sur quel type d'orientation nous désirions et nous prîmes finalement la décision de faire de la semaine d'orientation 1975, une semaine de plaisirs et de réunions étudiantes. Cela nous apparaissait comme primordial puisque pour le nouvel étudiant cela lui est plus important de se sentir à l'aise que d'avoir de l'information sur les problèmes qu'il aura à faire face durant son premier séjour au collège. Il semble d'autant plus logique qu'après avoir ressenti le confort et après avoir noué quelques amitiés, qu'il se sentira capable d'affronter les problèmes de la vie universitaire.

C'est avec cette idée que nous préparâmes la semaine d'orientation 1975 de façon à mettre l'étudiant à l'aise, lui donner autant d'activités qu'il puisse en demander et, bien sûr, la chance de rencontrer plusieurs amis.

Alors voici un résumé des activités qui formeront la semaine d'orientation cette année. Le tout commence dimanche le 7 septembre alors qu'il y aura un comité d'accueil qui se fera un plaisir d'aider les étudiants qui arrivent en résidence. Nous avons pensé à tout et nous aurons même quelques caisses de bières pour se désalterer. Nous espérons vous rencontrer en grand nombre.

L'association des étudiants du Collège Glendon invite tous les étudiants du campus à une réception vin et fromage qui aura lieu après le souper dans la salle JCR (Junior Common Room). A cette occasion, les étudiants pourront rencontrer le principal du Collège M. David McQueen, le Doyen des étudiants M. Ronald Sabourin, ainsi que les conseillers de résidences. L'occasion est parfaite pour faire connaissance avec la direction et quelques personnes utiles de l'établissement.

Nous passons donc à lundi qui donnera l'occasion à plusieurs de visiter deux des endroits les plus intéressants de Toronto; Edward's Gardens ou le Science Centre. Les confortables autobus de la Gray Coach Line vous y amèneront et vous y reprendrons. Le départ aura lieu vers 10h a.m. et le retour s'effectuera vers 2.30h p.m. Le transport est gratuit, il n'y a que le billet d'entrer pour le Science Centre à déboursier.

Le prix vous sera communiqué ultérieurement.

Lundi soir dans le "Pit" de la résidence Hilliard aura lieu le premier des trois "party" avec bière et musique au bout. Ces parties seront pour les résidents mais ceux qui veulent y participer seront bienvenus. C'est à 9hrs pm dans la salle ODH (Old Dining Hall) qu'aura lieu la première danse avec le groupe "Schoeder". C'est une danse à ne pas manquer.

Nous arrivons à mardi, qui bien que sans activités particulières durant la journée, sera très importante car c'est la journée d'information. Il y aura dans la salle ODH, le matin et l'après-midi, des présentations par tout les clubs et organisations du campus. C'est une excellente opportunité pour vous de poser des questions et de vous renseigner sur les activités para-scolaires à Glendon. Il y aura mardi soir de 6 à 9 h dans le "Pit" le 2e party de résidence. On espère vous offrir une danse ou un spectacle plus tard mais les arrangements ne sont pas encore au point.

Nous sommes maintenant à mercredi, journée du "Shinerama" à Glendon. Vous êtes invités à vous rendre en nombre à la tente qui sera située sur le terrain entre les deux résidences et d'y participer activement. Mercredi soir de 6 à 9 hp.m., toujours dans le "Pit" aura lieu le dernier party de résidence avec encore une fois de la bière gratuite. Plus tard au Café de la Terrasse, il y aura une soirée de variété. C'est la seule activité auquel il y aura un prix d'entrée qui sera déterminé au début de la semaine. L'argent de cette soirée sera envoyée aux fonds la recherche sur la fibrose kistoc. Venez tous c'est pour une bonne cause.

La semaine avance et nous sommes rendu à jeudi. C'est la journée athlétique et le mot d'ordre est "participation".

Il y aura durant la journée de nombreuses compétitions qui exigeront agilité, courage, habilité, force et bien sûr de l'intelligence. Le tout débutera avec le "Glendonnapolis 500", une épreuve qu'il ne faut pas manquer. Pour plus de renseignements, il y aura les heures de chaque épreuve d'afficher mais c'est le soir après le souper que la journée athlétique atteindra son point culminant avec la partie de balle molle, étudiants, membres de la faculté et "Dons". Soyez présent pour le spectacle de "Québechaud" (à noter que pour des raisons techniques le spectacle pourrait être décommandé). Voilà, la fin de la semaine d'orientation s'approche car nous sommes maintenant rendu à vendredi. Vous pouvez faire la grâce matinée car l'activité principale de vendredi ne débute qu'à 11h a.m., elle se situera sur le terrain près du Proctor Fieldhouse. Cette activité, c'est un Pique-Nique. Il y aura beaucoup de nourriture et de liqueurs gazeuses. Vous pouvez cependant apporter votre bière. Nous espérons vous y voir en grand nombre. Ce sera une activité en plein air où vous aurez à la fois l'occasion de vous remplir l'estomac et de faire des connaissances. Vendredi soir vous devez tous venir à la Danse que Radio-Glendon organise. Ce sera une danse "bilingue", et comme l'on connaît la qualité des danses de Radio Glendon par les années passées, celle-ci se promet d'être fantastique. Alors si vous voulez danser et avoir du plaisir, venez, vous ne le regretterez pas. C'est gratuit!

Il ne reste maintenant que deux jours avant la fin de la semaine d'orientation. Pour les amateurs de souliers, samedi aura lieu le Shinerama de Toronto. Une bonne occasion de servir une bonne cause et de connaître Toronto. Diane Doiron nous donnera un plan détaillé de la stratégie pour le Shinerama. Maintenant pour ceux qui ne sont pas des amateurs de souliers, nous vous suggérons de passer au bureau d'information où il y a de la documentation sur les meilleurs endroits pour se divertir à Toronto. Il y en a beaucoup et ça vaut la peine. Samedi soir il y aura deux danses qui auront lieu en même temps, l'une au Café Terrasse et l'autre dans la salle ODH. Dans le Café ce seront les "Don River Boys" qui vous feront chanter dans un atmosphère fantastique. Pendant ce temps dans le ODH se déroulera une danse de musique rock avec un groupe dont certains membres sont des étudiants de Glendon. Les danses sont gratuites, profitez-en! Il y aura aussi pour finir samedi and commencer dimanche une projection de quelques court-métrages ainsi qu'un long métrage, le tout dans la salle 204.

Nous sommes rendu à la dernière journée de la semaine d'orientation qui est dimanche et la seule activité prévue est un festival de film au local 204. La projection se fera de 2h à 5h et de 7h à 12h p.m. Alors un dernier effort et rendez-vous en nombre pour cette activité finale. Lundi c'est un congé bien mérité pour tous alors bon repos. Ceci est donc la semaine d'orientation 1975, nous espérons qu'elle vous plaira et ce que nous espérons le plus encore c'est que vous participiez tous.

Glendon Shinerama

by Jennifer Kasper

The year is about to start and somewhere in the confusion and excitement of orientation, students are going to hear about Shinerama and ask themselves - "What is it?", "What is it about?"

Shinerama is a fund-raising campaign to aid Cystic Fibrosis research. All over Canada right now, students and especially frosh like yourselves, are organizing to make their shining days a financial success because it's for a good cause and a great way to have fun too.

Cystic Fibrosis is a disease that affects the lungs and digestive system of children. It starts with a gene disorder and somehow (doctors don't know much about it) evolves into a mucous-like liquid in the system. There is no real cure for C/F but there is extensive treatment needed to help C/F victims.

Treatments consist of daily pounding to clear the liquid and in lots of cases, a C/F child can take up to 200 pills daily. Many need oxygen tents to sleep in at night. After all this however, the children may live only to their twenties. C/F is not a physicalcrippler; it's an internal killer and affects one in a thousand children. What can be done?

Money from private donations is used for research and assistance. The government doesn't channel much money into research so when students go out on Shinerama, you can bet that the money you make with other Canadian students is going to make up alot for Cystic Fibrosis research.

Glendon has a good chance of getting at least 200 students out on Sat. Sept. 13th. There's a Pep Rally at 9:00 am at U of T (we shine with U of T and Ryerson that day) and Metro Shinerama supplies the shoe kits. Off we go shining shoes and actually, that's also a great way for new students to get involved

During Orientation, we have Shinerama day Sept 10th; a dry runthrough of shining shoes, and on Wednesday night (the 10th) in the Café de la Terrasse, Shinerama presents its Variety Night. There is an admission charge of $0.75. All proceeds go to C/F. You won't regret coming.

Meanwhile, these last stages require bodies and help. Anyone who'd like to be involved should leave their name and other important information with Diane Doiron, Hilliard Res.

We need everyone out on Saturday September 13th. More later!

PUT A SHINE ON.

Here's Derek McGrath shining shoes to fight Cystic Fibrosis.

Like thousands of college students across Canada, Derek is out shining shoes to raise money for the Cystic Fibrosis research fund. The project is called "Shinerama."

So when you see the students in your neighborhood... stop and put a shine on.

SHINERAMA

CANADIAN YOUNG PEOPLE FIGHTING CYSTIC FIBROSIS

Metro Toronto Shinerama

Diane Doiron

The four "shining" days are the focal point of Shinerama Week - Sept. 9th to 16th. Another highlight will be the Shinerama parade on Wednesday the 10th, which begins at the University of Toronto and ends up at Nathan Phillips Mayor David Crombie and Metro Chairman Paul Godfrey.

Metro Shinerama is part of a Canada-wide campaign by students, begun eleven years ago. That first year, eight universities participated and raised $9,318.74. Last year, 43 universities and colleges across Canada got together and raised $185,507.00 for C/F research.

The University of Ottawa has won the national trophy for the past ten years. It's time Metro Toronto won. The only way to win is to get out every student, whether frosh or old-timers to shine shoes, boots, and hard hats.

The Honourable chairman this year is Duff Roman of CHUM-FM. Gene Taylor of CITY TV is sticking his best foot forward for Shinerama also. Duff and Gene will be doing publicity during the campaign. The Toronto Sun is helping off-campus publicity tremendously with full coverage of all activities.

It has taken nearly 8 months, but I am now proud to say that Radio Glendon has moved out of the unfurnished sewer in which it resided for 3 years. We are now located in Glendon Hall (The Mansion) on the main floor, where the G.C.S.U. offices used to be. Along with a new location, we have also acquired some brand new equipment. Now we not only have a main studio but a recording studio also. Radio Glendon extends an open invitation to all Glendonites to come and see us in our new location.

This year we will need a number of people to help us with our programming. We need people for announcing, news and production. As well as our regular programming we hope to be doing a lot more music and news specials, interviews and radio drama's. It is not necessary to have any knowledge of equipment, as each person will be individually trained to a high level of competence.

We would like to increase the percentage of Francophones on staff this year. Another point of which we are constantly reminded is that it is International Women's Year and so we especially invite all you ladies out there to come to the station, but we still invite anyone to drop in and see or if you happen to spot a Radio Glendon T-shirt just run up and ask that individual anything you want about the station. We will see you all this Friday at the first Radio Glendon dance (it's free) and with luck our illustrious manager, Uncle Al, will do his famous dance of the seven microphones.

EYEWITNESS SPORTS 75

DATELINE: PAS LE CAMPUS NORMALE

Bonjour là, Bonjour sports fans and bien-venu once again to that oasis in this sea of academic despair, Eyewitness Sports '75, vol. 11, no. 1. As has been the custom of this otherwise dull and dreary excuse for a great metropolitan daily, this column will be begged, borrowed, published, written, contrived and/or stolen by yours truly Hail Bruin (or Haywood as Bo Donaldson has aptly named his rock quartet). This semester, joining you once again my rabid reading and viewing public, will be that Tidal Basin Bombshell, or that Tidal Bore (or is that Total Bore) Ms. Edwina Stiff and Henry Longhurst back from a summer vacance at the A.A. day camp at Pefferlaw, where such notables as Tom "Belgian Bomber" Lietaer (whom you will undoubtedly hear and see more about), and Marnie "Martini" Stranks boozed away the été.

As it happens, this week while I was watching the Jerry Lewis Labour Day Telethon, I phoned in my pledge of 2 canes, 3 crutches and a one wheeled wheelchair when who should answer the phone but Tom "Belgian Bomber" Lietaer. In the ensuing conversation Thomas recounted the story of his eternal fight to stay off the booze and return to the basketball court where he truly belongs. But what you say? You don't know of the "Belgian Bomber", you have forgotten, you like it or not, "Belgian Bomber will soon be a household word.

To you first year students, frosh, or rookies may my entire crew wish you a fond welcome to the 86 (eighty-six) acres of lush parkland, (once declared a national park, but later rejected due to the smoke in the air) known to its permanent residents as Le bilingual drop-out centre and bistro. (At this time, it is only fitting that we enter a small plug on behalf of the management of Larry's Light Lunches (known in the daylight hours as Barrie's Bright Brunches), your local centre for group or singles entertainment, open 24 hours a day, Eight Days a Week for the Beatles' convenience. In the event that it has gone unnoticed, this is the sports column, where jock itch is only a scratch away. However we must warn you that any mention of sporting events may be many athletes' feet away, and only purely coincidental, if not incidental or even irrelevental.

After less than two but more than one week of sitting here behind my I.B.M. Selectric it suddenly comes to mind that we have made no mention of the last années spectacles du sport. To those of you who were not here last year and therefore missed them, and to those of you who chose to read our competitor's column, that of A. "Rip-Off Bevan" in the Atkinson Balloon, where he informed you of the relationship between the cost of paving parking lots and their necessity in the Glendon Sport scene, may we refresh your memories. (Or was that Dead Pigeons over the library roof).

Anyway: Recall how nothing happened and this column made the most of it. But remember, we were there, and made dead bears come to life before your very eyes. This year we promise even bigger and better things. And to top it off the alien Chiroquacs won it all, besting such as Glendon Squads, as First-Aid and Faculty, the Over-the-Hill Gang, the inimitable Bayview Oilers and the Axemen of A-house fame. As the regular liseurs of this page already have ascertained anybody whose anybody participated on the latter squads (not to be confused with the the Latter Day Saints), and gone from these squads are such familiar and legendary gone from that former sports dynasty are Juan Bentley Bo Beniquez, known as Buntley during baseball season, Dunkley during B-ball season, Puntley from the football gridiron and in the off-season as Dinkley, and Niloc Nottsirocam (one of the famed Dope Connection troika). Boodle "Too-Tall" Noodle has likewise screwed off. (at least that's what all the broads tell me).

Notables that have departed from the inept Axemen squad include Stuart "So-Tall" Spence who once outduelled Greg Ellis in a G.F.L. match and Kareem Abdul Kulach (Jack to his friends) who was the Polish Prince of all Glendon sports, from soup to nuts. The Over-the-Hill Gang has lost almost everybody but who cares.

But all this is in the past, little more is in the present, but the future, "Ah, there's the rub"(a-dub dub, three men in the tub)(and four more in the waiting room).

(Pardon us, no pardon me, I sometimes forget we're only one person. For you philosophy majors, figure it out! Anyway, we never were Ziebarted, the rust has settled and like the Tin-Man, we need some oil. For those of you who have never read Eyewitness Sports, put a buzz on and maybe you'll understand. And don't forget, "You're the one, you are the only reason. You, you're the one, that we take pride in pleasing. You're why we write this crap and you deserve a break today. At Hail Bruin's we do it all for you." Wasn't that fryriffic (my better-half says frytastic). Where were we? Oh! I know. At Macdonalds.

As the amis of this écrivain are undoubtedly aware, Glendon after a time fatigues one, it is sometimes labelled a tiresome place, where happiness is often little more than a toke away. Indeed, Glendon has even, on various occasions been deemed to be a drag. What you say? This is a revelation to you? Well, my friends, unfold the garb that surrounds this idyllic campus and suddenly everything will become cosmic. I know. I suddenly saw the light at last year's Topless Pogo Stick Contest. And that is the very reason why our entire staff, myself Hail Bruin (or Dip-pidy Do as mumsy calls me), Ms. Stiff, the K-Tel Record Selector and Henry Longhurst will soon be departing for merry old England and the rest of Europe in the vain hope of regaining our objectivity. Therefore, heretofore this column will be datelined throughout that continent and will feature such exclusives as Yak Fighting in Suburbian Poland, and Breast-feeding: the Swedish Example. Here comes a brand new season on Eyewitness Sports. You're gonna like it a lot.

And now with little more than a tear in my eye here are this year's farewells, goodbyes and au revoirs as you froggies call 'em. These good wishes are a necessity at this time for in a mere fortnight times 3, this office will be on the road and most of you, my avid reading and viewing public, will be once again too familiar with Glendon, where the trees are higher than the buildings.

To those who respect me;

A bushel and a peck and a hug around the neck. Your feet may be gritty, but you haven't got sand in your brain.

To my critics;

When I'm in a sober mood,
I worry, work, and think.
When I'm in a drunken mood,
I gamble screw and screw.
And when my moods are over,
And my time has come to pass,
I hope they bury me upside down,
So the world can kiss my ass.

Beaver

by Don Smith

Welcome back to Glendon Students! We the Beaver staff at Glendon would like to make your eating hours a little more pleasant. We would like to convey to you an open door policy. If you have any ideas constructive criticism or any special items you would like to see on the menu, tell us about them. We also have a bulletin board called "Beaver Tales" in the main dining room where you can present your ideas on paper. I will read them daily. We have a new chef, Gord Perry, a new week-end supervisor Anna Rea and during the week, our supervisor is Anna Adaman. We aim to please. We need communication. Please talk to us; we can help.

SALUT LES REVENANTS!

Jindra Rutherford is Glendon's Information Officer.

Hope you had a good and financially profitable summer. You'll need every penny you made. Suggestion: Take a course in Economics --- it might explain why Beaver Foods is charging more.

Do you know what Glendon was like last summer? A gigantic, fully integrated sauna without the benefit of either showers or nudity. The latter was reserved for Hanlan's Point, but even there it was risky. Police charged 52 persons with indecent exposure. At Glendon we kept the decorum and tried to "think snow" but it melted in the sun before you could say it. There were rumours, probably unfounded, that somebody had invented a machine to cool the air inside the buildings. If it's true, maybe one of these years it'll come on minimum de cette province. Elle est la première femme à recevoir ce titre de Glendon, "en reconnaissance de son oeuvre de pionnier et de tous les efforts qu'elle a accomplis pour l'émancipation juridique et sociale de la femme", comme l'a si bien exprimé le docteur Jeannette Urbas dans sa présentation

Trop souvent, l'accumulation de titres cache le vrai caractère d'une personne. Ayant passé deux journées avec Mme. Kirkland-Casgrain à Toronto, je puis vous assurer que c'est une femme épatante, douée d'un merveilleux sens d'humour, et dépourvue de vanité. Imaginez la, tout d'abord, et d'une toque universitaires, recevant avec une grave dignité le degré honorifique des mains du Chancelier, observée de près par tous les personnages de l'Université rassemblés sur l'estrade. Et plus tard, quand le temps est venu de rentrer à l'hôtel, elle re-

Convocation

You might like to know what has been happening here since your dispersal.

The Convocation ceremony went without a hitch. For the third year running it was a Glendon graduate -- they're getting mad at us on the main campus -- who received the highest award for academic excellence and exceptional contribution to university activities, the Governor-General's Gold Medal. Only one is given by each university. The recipient, Jane Guthrie, had also been chosen by the graduating class to give the valedictory address and she gave a good one, on the value of education and women's rightful place in society. It fit nicely into International Women's Year.

Le doctorat honoris causa du Collège a été conféré à l'honorable Claire Kirkland-Casgrain, juge de la Cour provinciale du Québec et président de la Commission du salaire

"Pourquoi pas?" dit Mme Kirkland-Casgrain, "nous ne voulons pas nous séparer." Alors tous s'entassent dans la voiture et on en rigole jusqu'à l'hôtel. Elle n'est certainement pas séparatiste.

Un excellent article, intitulé "Glendon honore Claire Kirkland-Casgrain", a paru dans Courrier Sud. Il était écrit par Chake Tchillinguirian.

One of our graduates, Mildred Stone, was interviewed on the radio by Betty Kennedy. Three years ago, at the age of 50, Mildred decided to get her B.A., and the day of her graduation happened to be her 33rd wedding anniversary. She is going on to the Ontario College of Education to become a teacher. It's never too late.

WELCOME BACK!

Communiqué and Edelweiss

The next issue of Communiqué, York alumni bulletin, is going to have a three-page article on Glendon, the writing of which occupied some of my time during the heat wave. Even my typewriter was perspiring. The article is accompanied by a photograph of the campus by our new principal, Dr. David McQueen, I can see that he is going to be a tough competitor in the field of campus photography.

During Glendon's Open House in June -- two hundred persons came to case the joint -- I found out from Lawrence Geller that some twenty bilingual students had been snapped up by the organizing committee for the U.N. Conference on Crime, and that some bilingual Glendonites had found summer jobs at the City Hall, the Science Center, and Ontario Place. Well, the U. N. Conference was moved to Geneva but the other places are still here and what Lawrence had told me was certainly true. One day in Ontario Place, I sat in "Edelweiss" (that's the oom-pa-pa Biergarten where they teach you to sing "Ein Prosit der Gemuetlichkeit") and was about to bite into my Wurst und Sauerkraut, when an impeccably dressed young man said to me, "You work at Glendon don't you?" My gosh, I thought, have I forgotten to give him his loan or something? But all was well. He was one of our friendly francophone students working there, although he did look more like the manager. (Moral: It pays to be bilingual.)

Penetanguishene

La succursale de Glendon à Penetanguishene marche comme sur des roulettes. Deux cours ont été offerts pendant l'été. L'autre jour, Helje Porré, qui avait enseigné "Le Théâtre du XXe siècle" à Penetanguishene, est venue me voir et elle débordait d'enthousiasme. Ses quatorze étudiants, âgés de vingt-huit à quarante-deux ans, travaillaient bien, ne manquaient jamais les classes, et tous ont réussi à l'examen. Il fallait s'y attendre. Ils étaient tous instituteurs. Mais quel bel exemple pour leurs propres élèves! "J'ai reçu moi-même pas mal de stimulation intellectuelle", dit Mlle Porré en parlant de sa classe. Radieuse et hâlée, Mlle Porré a tellement aimé Penetanguishene qu'elle y est revenue plus tard pour trois semaines de vacances.

Le journal de Penetanguishene, grâce à Jim Park -- un ancien de Glendon -- rapporte fidèlement tout ce qui a trait aux activités du Collège dans cet endroit charmant de la Baie Georgienne: la visite du principal McQueen; la visite de Thérèse Boutin, notre préposée aux liaisons scolaires; les cours qui seront offerts en automne. Le bébé pénétanguishénien de Glendon se porte bien.

The God of Thievery

If you got the impression that nothing unpleasant happened at Glendon last summer, read on.

The date was July 29. I received a call from Evelyn Eppes in the Physical Plant asking me if I had a picture of the Winged Mercury, the beautiful little statue in front of Glendon Hall. She wanted to show it to the police to help them find it. It had been stolen. The god of commerce, manual skill, eloquence, cleverness, travel, and thievery had been stolen! (I wonder why the Romans had the same god for commerce and thievery? Rather clever of them.) I supplied the picture and got the story. The night before, three guys had left the Café and loaded the pewter statue into the trunk of their car. And although they were taking the French immersion course at Glendon, they did not know that "on ne badine pas avec les dieux". (I know it's "l'amour", but you can see why it would not fit.) It so happened -- and I am sure old Mercury had something to do with it -- that a girl was walking by with her boyfriend and she noted the licence number of the statue-nappers' car, smart girl, which helped a lot, because the police recovered the god fast, but not fast enough. The poor thing returned to Glendon in lamentable shape: one leg broken at the knee, backside scraped, and the whole body plastered with ugly, greenish paint.

It will cost a small fortune to get it restored. Vandalism is not funny.

Well, if you've read this far, you know that life goes on at Glendon in summer, heat or no heat. I'll keep you posted from time to time on what my "department" is up to. And if you need any help to publicize your special events outside Glendon's gates, come and see me in Room C204, York Hall. Have fun until the first essay comes along or until your beer money runs out -- whichever happens last.

AT THE RIVERBOAT

by Larry Guimond

Of all the musical speciality places to go for a night in Toronto, the Riverboat has proved consistently over the years to be a rewarding experience. The club, or the U-boat as it is affectionately called, has supported folk music in Toronto for quite a number of years. Stars such as Joni Mitchell, Neil Young, and Gordon Lightfoot have all made their start at this small club located in the heart of Yorkville. During the boom years of the late sixties, the Riverboat made a point of helping along Toronto's folk population. Along with this, the location acted as the local stopover for the folk circuit which included New York and Chicago.

As the seventies hit Toronto and Yorkville turned back into an exclusive shopping district, the Riverboat disappeared from popular view. With high cover charges and a lack of support for local talent, the Riverboat hit a stretch of bad luck and late last year was on the verge of closing up shop. Since that time things have begun to change and the Riverboat of today resembles that of the folk era of the late sixties.

The management and the staff of the Riverboat are now openly friendly. No longer are people asked to leave nor are they thrown out after one set. Guest sets which are an integral part of a successful folk club are once again part of the act. A good illustration of this is a recent one week engagement of Ramblin' Jack Elliott. Ramblin' Jack needs no one to help along his show. The guests for the week included David Rea, Leon Redbone and Murray McLaughlin. At least two Toronto local folk acts performed guest sets during the week as well.

Local talent appears to be gaining support from the Riverboat as the management is bringing in more and more. People such as Michal Hasek, Stringband, and David Essig are all Toronto performers who deserve the help they are receiving from the Riverboat. With their new policy of friendliness and support of local talent, it is well worthwhile to rediscover the Riverboat, or make it a first time experience. You will be pleased by both the calibre of talent and the intimacy of one of the finest folk clubs of its kind.

The Riverboat is located at 134 Yorkville Ave. Stringband is featured this week. The club runs from 8:00 p.m. until 3:00 a.m. but the music seldom goes past 12:00 or 12:30. The new Riverboat is promoting Toronto folk music and it depends on this city's folk fans to insure that the Riverboat receives support.

FROM THE SPORTS DESK

GLENDON ATHLETICS....

This year the aim of the Glendon athletic programme is to interest people who want to come out for a lot of fun and a bit of exercise. The programme will stress recreation rather than competition.

Every Thursday afternoon there will be some activity, such as swimming, down at the Fieldhouse, to which anyone interested in keeping fit but not in competing can come and enjoy themselves.

Aside from the recreational activities, there are also competitive activities, either on the intramural or intercollege levels. On the intramural level, you compete for your house or your year to gain points toward the Glendon Shield. At the end of the year, the house with the most points, or the year, wins the Shield. This is basically a fun thing aimed at competitiveness on a not so serious level.

At the intercollege level you compete with the other colleges at York Main. Competition is a bit stiffer but nonetheless the basic aim is still to have fun.

The Glendon athletic programme is for you and if you have any suggestions for activities you would like to participate in, please don't hesitate to come down to the Fieldhouse and talk to us about it.

Le programme d'athlétisme à Glendon a pour but d'intéresser non seulement aux aînés mais à ceux qui sont intéressés à la récréation, ceux qui veulent avoir beaucoup de fun.

À Glendon, il y a trois niveaux de sports; le niveau récréatif, le niveau intramural, et le niveau de compétition entre les autres collèges de York.

Chaque jeudi, entre 13h 15 et 15h 15, il y aura quelque chose au Pavillon des Sports pour ceux qui cherchent la récréation non-compétitive.

Il y a aussi la compétition entre les maisons des résidences pour gagner des points, afin d'obtenir le Glendon Shield. Là, c'est au niveau intramural et la compétition n'est pas aussi difficile que la compétition entre les autres collèges. L'idée, en tout cas, est d'avoir du fun.

On a besoin de vous pour faire du programme un succès, alors, si vous avez des questions ou bien des suggestions, venez nous voir au Pavillon des Sports.

Louise Regan and Doug Gayton, Glendon's Athletic Reps.
