OFS-FEO Lobbying pour un réseau universitaire francophone

par Bernard Asselin

La Fédération des étudiants de l'Ontario (FEO) pourrait très prochainement exercer des pressions politiques afin d'obtenir un réseau post-secondaire francophone en Ontario.

Cette revendication pour les francophones est le résultat de plusieurs démarches entreprises au cours de l'été par DJ (Direction Jeunesse) auprès de l'exécutif de la FEO. Un comité spécial sur les dossiers francophones a été créé en juin dernier lors du congrès de la FEO à Ottawa.

Lors du congrès de la FEO qui se tenait les 19, 20, 21 et 22 septembre à l'Université Western de London, la motion suivante a été acceptée: considérant que les Franco-Ontariens ont besoin d'un système d'éducation afin de poursuivre leurs études dans leur langue dans les domaines des sciences pures, des sciences de la santé et des technologies nouvelles, la FEO encourage fortement la création d'un réseau d'éducation francophone entre les Universités Laurentienne et d'Ottawa ainsi que les Collèges Hearst et Glendon.

La FEO entend accorder beaucoup d'importance à une éventuelle campagne en vue d'obtenir un tel réseau.

Selon Nicole Loretto de l'Université Laurentienne: "le réseau a bien été soutenu".

De son côté Leanne McMillan (première employée bilingue engagée par FEO) mentionne qu'il a été difficile pour les membres de la FEO d'accepter le principe de spécialisation dans la proposition du Comité francophone. En effet, selon elle, la FEO s'oppose farouchement à toute spécialisation (comme le propose Bette Stephenson) car ainsi le gouvernement pourrait être justifié dans ses coupures budgétaires sur les campus.

A l'intérieur du réseau universitaire francophone, la FEO désire d'abord la création d'un comité de travail ayant comme mandat l'étude de faisabilité d'un plan de développement.

Ce réseau comprendrait le Collège universitaire de Hearst, l'Université Laurentienne, l'Université d'Ottawa et le Collège Glendon.

Comme autres sujets traités lors du congrès, mentionnons la Commission Bovey, le dossier des femmes et une stratégie politique concernant les élections provinciales qui approchent.

Invité à se prononcer sur la mise sur pied d'un tel réseau, David Peterson (leader libéral de l'opposition officielle à Queen's Park) mentionnait qu'un réseau pourra être créé s'"il y a une demande".

En Ontario, la FEO/FCE-O regroupe plus de 200 000 étudiants d'universités et de collèges communautaires. Elle est reconnue par le gouvernement et les autorités de l'éducation comme étant la voix des étudiant(e)s en Ontario.

Glendon se retirait de la FEO en 1982, suite à des pressions exercées à l'époque par le président de l'AECG, Carl Héту.

FALL ELECTIONS

by Elizabeth McCallister

The Fall Elections of the Glendon College Student Union will be held on October 18 and 19. Nominations will open on October 1 at 9 a.m. and close at 5 p.m. on October 5.

According to the new Constitution, the Student Council will have ten counselors. These positions will be filled in the upcoming elections. Any Glendon student can be a counselor. As part of their duties, they will attend Council meetings, help the directors of the Union and serve on various committees.

There are two first year representatives on the Council. Candidates for these positions can only be first year students and will be elected by the first year students. As well, there are two part-time student representatives. Candidates and voters for these positions must be part-time students (taking less than 3 full courses).

During these elections, twenty Faculty Council Student Representative positions are to be filled. The Faculty Council is not part of the Student Union, but the highest academic policy-making body at Glendon. Faculty counselors will be expected to attend monthly meetings and serve on the Council's committees.

Nomination forms will be available at the Student Union Office in York Hall. Chief Returning Officer, David Olivier, or one of the two Deputy Returning Officers (DRO) will be available in the GCSU office to answer any questions concerning the elections.

Nomination forms will require the candidate's name, student number, and the position. There must also be a sec-under's signature and student number on the nomination form. Then the CRO or a DRO will place the form in the ballot box.

When a candidate has been nominated, he/she will receive a copy of the Election Advertising Policy. This policy states the regulations concerning posters, campus media use, etc., during an election campaign. Campaigning will begin at 5:01 p.m. October 5 and continue until Wednesday Oct. 17.

Voting will take place during the hours of 8:30 a.m. - 5:30 p.m. on October 18 and 19. Students are required to present their sessional validation cards at the polling station. The unofficial results of the election will be announced the evening the polls close and barring any appeals or complications will be made official at the next council meeting.

CAROLE STRYPCHUK PRESIDENT OF GCSU

by Janet Oja

'I want us to integrate. The only way we are going to integrate is if we interact. Otherwise it's just a word.'

Carole Strypchuk, president of GCSU 1984-85, feels it is very easy to integrate at Glendon. She 'came out of nowhere' to be president. She did it by talking. Not enough students get involved because they do not seem to understand that GCSU is the main body on campus. It appears to be a social body of directors; therefore, students do not appreciate their own power and the number of rights they have.

'Yet they pay! If it wasn't for the students, it (Glendon) could be a health spa. It could be a shopping mall, and also, they pay an awful lot of money; an awful lot of money to come here.'

In order to make Glendon students aware of their rights and power, Miss Strypchuk would like to see more GCSU workshops. By opening up the J.C.R. and Hearth Room (serving coffee and cookies 'because everyone likes them'), she hopes to encourage people to talk and to interact. She wants more student leaders and club leaders instead of a few main spokesmen from one tiny source. Otherwise, everything would circulate within that tiny group. She wants to see the decision-making process spread out among more people.

Miss Strypchuk feels the council owes a great deal of responsibility to the students because students have no choice of whether or not they belong to the union. Every student is a member. For every full-time equivalent (sometimes a combination of a student taking two courses, with a student taking three courses), $42.50 automatically goes to GCSU from students' fees. Glendon Student Union receives more money than any other college in York for two reasons. The first is that services must be duplicated so copies can be sent to York. The second reason is that everything must be done in two languages.

The money is used well and is controlled as a body. Consequently, the concept of power arises. 'It is important for the body to understand power and control,' says Miss Strypchuk. If students were to integrate as she desires, this power and control would be realized and understood. Considering the calibre of students at Glendon, she sees no reason why this cannot be accomplished. 'I've never met anyone who is stupid yet. Everyone always seemed pretty smart to me.'

Miss Strypchuk would like to see students rely on alternate sources of money-making instead of constantly depending on council. Again, this will come about only if students blend resources and are innovative. She regards university as the 'golden opportunity' to try a few things out, especially fund-raising because it increases everyone's benefits. No one gets condemned for trying. 'It is O.K. if you lose because you learn for next time. You will not get kicked out of school for it but you could get fired.'

Another goal for the students

Miss Strypchuk would like to obtain is more student space. 'My main concern is that we seem to have spaces that were supposedly ours or supposedly Students Services and we seem to lose them for outside things'. C.D. Howe, located above Glendon Hall is a prime example of this. There is a great need for student space and she wants to concentrate on gaining it. At present, the students have the J.C.R. The Hearth Room will soon be administered.

The GCSU office itself has cramped quarters. The president barely has enough room to make a phone call. She does have an office, but there are many things going on in it. The student union has a computer room which was obtained through a division of her office...the school would not give them space.

Miss Strypchuk has a strong dedication to the students of Glendon. She is a student herself. She is studying subjects that were 'foreign' to her: math, computers, economics. 'These are things I did not know about but encountered.' When asked about her position as president of GCSU, she replied, 'I love it. Why should I not? It is the best job in the entire university. It is.'

The presidential term runs from May to May. Though she loves it, she did not enjoy the summer. 'The problem with the summer is there is no such thing as a Glendon student; therefore, it becomes an administrative job. GCSU's biggest resource is the GCSU.'

Ironically enough, it was not her idea to come to Glendon, much less to run for president. She comes here with quite an interesting background. She was born in Montreal where her family still resides. When she was sixteen years old she was professionally involved with theatre. She attended theatre school in England for one year and then returned to do movies and shows in Montreal. For the past eight years she has lived in Toronto and has done 'T.V. things'. She was also voted on the board of directors for the Toronto Theatre Alliance and she has worked for the National Ballet. Over half of her life has been spent acting. She felt she was in an odd profession. 'To be an artist in this country is an appalling thing.' After doing a bit of 'different things' she decided to change her life. Glendon is helping her do that.

A friend talked her into coming here. She is very pleased with the availability of resources and has never met anyone she could not talk to. Being president of GCSU as well as being a student are 'learning experiences' for her. She is very dedicated to both. Carole is a fine example of what happens when a student takes the initiative and integrates. She is, after all, the president of Glendon College Student Union! Back and forth from classes to the student union office, she walks full of energy and smiles at everyone. She answers 'everything is wonderful', if asked how things are going. Yet, like everyone else, she does have her bad days. In a straightforward and honest manner, she will simply reply (without a smile), 'Everyone is bugging me.'

THE MYSTERY OF C.D. HOWE

by Scott Anderson

C.D. Howe, the prestigious economic institute will be leaving Glendon College in April, in much the same way as it arrived, surrounded by an air of mystery.

The C.D. Howe Economic Institute which has been occupying space on the second floor of the Glendon Mansion, has managed to maintain almost total anonymity since its controversial arrival just over two years ago. The whole issue started in May of 1982 when Dr. W. Dobson of C.D. Howe expressed interest to the York Administration, Principal Garigue included, in obtaining some space at Glendon. Bill King, then Executive Officer, decided that the space on the second floor of the Glendon Mansion was a "sufficiently large space."

The real problem arose as a result of the allotment of this space. The area in which C.D. Howe had been granted was space occupied by the students for their own use. It was being used at the time of the controversy as an infirmary. The Dean of Students, Prof. W. Gutwinski, acting on behalf of the students' interests, attempted a number of times to veto the move into student occupied territory. After many attempts at vetoing this act failed, Prof. Gutwinski threatened to resign should this act be allowed, this threat fell on deaf ears.

The entire negotiations of this pact between the C.D. Howe Institute and the York Administration was kept secret and as a result the students, the faculty, and the Dean of Students did not learn of the loss of their space until June 18, at a time when there is scarcely anybody around to act.

Although their lease does expire in April of 1985, the Institute has not yet given any official notice as to their future at Glendon. It is a consensus among faculty and administration though, that C.D. Howe will not be renewing their lease as space is a problem.

The Institute had expressed interest to Principal Garigue in obtaining more space but this application was turned down because there isn't any larger space to be offered.

"When the Director (C.D. Howe's) came to see me", explained Principal Garigue, "she made a request for more space, but I said unfortunately there isn't more space within Glendon, we are now somewhat short of space and therefore I cannot provide you with more space."

As a result of C.D. Howe vacating the premises there will be a rather large area of space available in the Glendon Mansion. Many organizations within Glendon have expressed interest in obtaining this area to be used for their individual clubs, including Carole Strypchuk, GCSU President. Strypchuk would like to see this space returned to the students to be used for many things. Among her ideas were a study hall or a larger GCSU office, which has been reduced somewhat in size since the formation of the computer center.

The person responsible for the allocation of the unoccupied space is Executive Officer J. Aubin-Roy. He has carefully considered a number of possibilities as to who will obtain that space and is still undecided as to who will get it.

"Basically what I would like to see would be to use that space for one related group. Which one I don't know. That will be one of the things we will really be able to see once we can see what can be done with the space; how it can be divided. Just the initial feeling I have is that if we could put one coherent group in there that is self-sufficient and would occupy all the space then that would be great."

Although J. Aubin-Roy, Principal Garigue and Yvette Szmidt were all unable to determine what the space would be used for, they all mentioned that a committee would be formed to discuss the situation. A committee of representatives from various groups and departments will be formed to discuss the most practical use of the space. This committee will operate in a democratic manner in which people will realize that the final decision is to be agreed upon by the majority of the persons involved.

"I think it (a committee) is the best way to deal with the situation because we have representatives from different groups who will supply different ideas. I don't know if everybody will be happy," says J. Aubin-Roy, "but everybody will understand what is happening."

As of right now it is really too early to determine for sure what the space will be used for after April 1985. Only time will tell.

STUDENT SERVICES

by Dave Chaikof

With the arrival of a new year at Glendon, it is important to remind everyone of the university's abundant and useful student services.

In the event that you find something slithering across your dinner plate, Henry Miller, Glendon's Food Services Ombudsman, will be glad to hear your complaint. You can contact him at A-House in Wood Residence. Henry fronts the Food Committee, which meets frequently with Rill to discuss problems and recommendations regarding food services. Each appointed house member must attend all meetings. Students are also welcome to voice their opinions.

A program not to be overlooked is Glendon's Student Security Service, now in its third year under the direction of Scott Rogers. It is comprised of fourteen fellow students who patrol the campus from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. each evening acting as an escort service. If you don't want to know what lurks about Glendon's sepulchral ground at night, call 667-333. Don't be shy. Someone will be pleased to assist you.

Katie Thomas, Glendon's Director of Clubs and Services, advises all students who missed the first club day that another club day will take place in October. Watch for signs outside the Junior Common Room. Get involved!

In preparation for La Maison de la Culture, the Mature Students' Lounge has moved into the daycare centre at the bottom of York Hall. It is open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. every Monday through Friday. Jan Morrissey, assistant to the dean of student services, encourages all mature undergraduates to drop in and come to know one another. An informal reception will take place Wed. October 3 at 4:30 p.m. in the Senior Common Room.

Furthermore, at York Main, the Student Affairs Centre 667-2226 has moved to room 124 in the Ross Building (beside the TD Bank). A foreign student advisor is available to aid enquiring students. Keep posted for more details.

Human rights code could spurn gays

WINNIPEG (CUP)—Manitoba's new human rights code may not protect lesbians and gay men from discrimination because the concern is not a priority of the provincial government, a gay community spokesperson says.

"It's too dangerous politically," says Louise Fehr. "It's disappointing but it's not surprising."

The proposed human rights code gives teeth to existing laws against all forms of discrimination, but a clause specifically prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation may not be included, according to Manitoba attorney-general Roland Penner.

Fehr says the NDP government fails to follow party policy on issues such as sexual orientation and reproductive choice.

Quebec is the only province whose human rights code bans discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation. "We keep waiting for the rest of Canada to catch up with Quebec; but it won't happen," Fehr says. "The political climate in Canada has gotten a lot more conservative."

LA COMMISSION BOVEY : UNE FAÇADE

Le projet de la ministre Bette Stephenson est clair: couper coûte que coûte dans le financement des universités, indépendamment des conséquences que cela pourrait avoir pour l'avenir de la jeunesse.

La commission Bovey n'est qu'une façade pour camoufler un plan décidé d'avance. Dans son discours du 15 décembre 1983, la ministre Stephenson mentionnait qu'elle allait créer une commission pour développer un "plan opérationnel" à l'échelle de la province. Présentement, la commission Bovey circule de ville en ville, accumulant les rapports que les commissaires ne liront même pas.

Les conséquences de ce projet, à court et long terme, seront notamment une augmentation des frais de scolarité, une réduction de l'aide aux étudiants à qui il ne sera accordé que des prêts (plus de bourses), enfin, une orientation vers la spécialisation. Ceci veut dire que la plupart des universités devront se spécialiser dans un domaine spécifique. Ainsi, les étudiants auront à se déplacer beaucoup plus pour pouvoir étudier dans le domaine de leur choix.

En 1960, le lieutenant-gouverneur de l'Ontario, M. J.K. Mackay, déclarait dans son discours: "...every student of ability and ambition who wishes to proceed to university will have the opportunity regardless of their financial means". Cette déclaration de principe devrait dicter l'orientation du système universitaire; le droit à l'éducation doit être préservé. Une étude de l'Institut de recherches de Stanford (Stanford Research Institute), menée en 1975, révélait qu'avec une baisse des frais de scolarité de 100$, le nombre d'inscriptions augmentait de 1% parmi les étudiants dont le revenu familial était supérieur à 12 000$ par année. Ce chiffre était de 7% pour ceux dont le revenu familial était inférieur à 6 000$ par année. Ces chiffres parlent d'eux-mêmes.

Le mémoire présenté à la commission Bovey par la Fédération des étudiants de l'Université d'Ottawa (F.E.U.O.) conclut: "Nous comprenons mal pourquoi l'éducation, qui est en fait un investissement dans l'avenir, du point de vue de la société autant que de l'individu, soit maintenant perçue comme étant une dépense que l'on doit couper de manière à équilibrer le budget".

Au moment de mettre sous presse, la F.E.O. (Fédération des étudiants de l'Ontario) organisait une manifestation à Toronto, laquelle fera l'objet d'un reportage dans la prochaine édition de Pro Tem. Il est important que les étudiants de Glendon s'impliquent dans le dossier. La prochaine manifestation aura lieu le 15 novembre. Lisez Pro Tem pour plus de détails...

A memo presented to the Bovey Commission by the University of Ottawa Students' Federation concludes: "We fail to understand why education, which is in fact an investment in the future, for society and for the individual, should now be viewed as an expense which must be cut in order to balance the budget."

As this edition went to the press, the Ontario Federation of Students (OFS) was organizing a demonstration to be held in Toronto, which Pro Tem will focus on in next week's issue. It is important that Glendon students get involved in the demonstration which will be held on November 15. Keep reading Pro Tem for more details.

Bette Stephenson's intention is clear enough to cut deeply into the province's post secondary spending, regardless of how this will affect current and future university students.

The Bovey Commission is merely a smoke-screen for plans which the Education Minister made well in advance. In a speech made on December 15, 1983, Mrs. Stephenson announced her plans to form a commission which would create a "blueprint" for post-secondary reform across the province. Currently, the Commission is travelling around Ontario, collecting reports which commissioners will not even read.

Among the consequences of the Commission's reforms will be higher tuitions, reductions in student aid (students will receive only loans, not grants) and a new emphasis on specialization. Most universities will have to specialize in a certain area of study, forcing students to go farther afield to study what they want.

In 1960, Ontario's Lieutenant-Governor of the day, Mr. J.K. Mackay, stated in his throne speech that "...every student of ability and ambition who wishes to proceed to university will have the opportunity regardless of their financial means." This should be the guiding principle for our university system; our right to education must be preserved.

A 1975 study by the Stanford Research Institute showed that a $100 decrease in tuition fees would result in a 1% enrollment increase among students whose family revenue is over $12,000 a year; the increase for the students whose families earn less than $6,000 a year would be 7%. These figures speak for themselves.

L'ICEBERG FRANCO-ONTARIEN

Pour répondre à la question de revirement adressée lors de l'éditorial de la semaine dernière... la réponse est oui!!! Le 17 septembre dernier a eu lieu une rencontre ayant pour but d'établir un comité d'étudiant(e) qui visera à valoriser et améliorer la qualité de la vie française sur le campus. Bref, la réponse à la question du 24 septembre a été donnée le 17 septembre... donc... on vous attendait.

Le comité agira comme liaison entre les Franco-Ontariens et les autres institutions de Glendon, afin de les sensibiliser à nos besoins en tant que population étudiante distincte, quoiqu'au coeur de l'idéal de Glendon. Le comité tâchera de sensibiliser la population de Glendon aux besoins du système d'éducation post-secondaire franco-ontarien, surtout ici à Glendon, mais aussi en liaison avec d'autres campus bilingues.

Il existe 14 campus bilingues en Ontario. Chaque campus est doté d'un comité et/ou d'une association qui ont sensiblement le même mandat que notre comité. Ainsi Glendon s'intègre dans le réseau qui regroupe ces 14 organisations étudiantes franco-ontariennes. Il s'agit pour nous de profiter de l'expérience acquise par les autres.

La communauté franco-ontarienne à Glendon est comparable à un iceberg. Nous n'en percevons présentement que la pointe, mais prenez garde, il risque de se renverser... Stéphane Charbonneau Denis Létourneau André Lévesque

Letter to the Editor:

Seeing as only my name was mentioned in the article last week 'Super Sax, Great Group...Bad Timing', I think I should set the facts straight.

First, the band The Villians came to Glendon on Tuesday, September 18. They were truly terrific, and I would go so far as to say that they were the best I've seen in many years. The facts are as follows: The finalizing of the contract did not take place until Monday at 6:30 pm. The proposal of the band did not take place until Friday the 14th. Considering the amount of time there was to publicize and organize five groups was minimal, all groups should be congratulated on their work. The fact that 150 students came to the event is proof enough that the hard work paid off, considering it was a Tuesday night.

Secondly, and most importantly, I did not say it was the first and last fund-raiser I would organize. I did say that the work involved was hard and troublesome; however, five student groups benefited, and that is all that counts.

As a matter of fact, I am presently working on another deal for a rather popular group to come to Glendon after Christmas. If I thought or said it was my first and last organizing of an event, the person who quoted me must be very wrong. Otherwise, why would I be planning another event already?

I think that Pro Tem should be primarily concerned with coverage of campus events and issues. You occupy a unique position in that you can provide insight into issues directly relevant to campus life.

For national or international news however, I must say that I prefer the Globe & Mail or the Toronto Star. They have resources which are not available to you. In fact, Pro Tem is only able to provide a synopsis of 'their' coverage. You may argue that Pro Tem is able to provide a historical or economic perspective that major papers do not. Do you believe that this is true?

Could you please address this issue in the paper soon? I think that the students have a right to hear your opinion on this issue.

Bette Stephenson: looking at us for more cutbacks?

Ontario universities is evident in a declining share of the Ontario budget. In 1969, 6.4% of the provincial budget was spent on universities. Today, only 4.5% goes to the universities—a 30% reduction.

Bette Stephenson implicitly admitted that the Government has underfunded universities and subsequently used it to support a rationalization of the university system. Speaking to the legislature about a previously commissioned report on Ontario universities, the Minister said "...discussion took place between the premier, myself, and university presidents to identify alternate (as opposed to closing some universities altogether) ways of bringing about the kind of rationalization which the Committee felt would be necessary under continued conditions of financial restraint." 'Restraint' being another word for underfunding. She left little doubt that the solution would inevitably be one of restructuring when she stated, 'We have no choice but to continue to exercise restraint.'

With regards to the style of restructuring, or 'reshaping', Bette Stephenson states that the universities themselves are incapable of reaching consensus amongst themselves on how to go about change within the system. Consequently, she proposes to re-organize their diversity into a more centralized, structure, rationalized and manageable set of institutions. These institutions would more effectively meet the demand of Ontario's business and industry's needs with the presently set spending levels. This involves eliminating some university programs and faculties altogether, having certain universities specialize in certain subjects instead of diversifying their calendars. And "...accessibility in the context of economic realities..."

Moreover, she forecasts a decline in student enrolment in the next decade as, she says, 'research has shown a positive correlation between youth unemployment and undergraduate enrolment.' 'It is logical', she continues, 'to anticipate a reduced demand for undergraduate post-secondary education in its traditional forms at least, as we move into and through the period of economic recovery.'

As a result, the Ontario government appointed a three man Commission under Edmund Bovey to create a "detailed operational plan to effect change", "a plan of action". The Commission, Bette Stephenson stated, will not involve itself in a "debate at the conceptual level". Rather, "...The Commission is being asked to present to the Government a plan of action to reshape the university system". Questioned on CBC radio program about people's reactions that Government changes could mean closing down faculties, restricting admission and increasing tuition fees, Bovey brilliantly responded "...the reactions seem to be based on information that I don't have." Nor is he certain of the origin of the term "reshaping" because the study is titled "the Commission for the Future Development of the Universities of Ontario". However in a later interview he says, "It is clear to us that the status on universities cannot be retained indefinitely".

Bovey has a business background as a member of the Board of Directors of Hollinger Argus Ltd., Abitibi-Price, Canada Packers, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Norcen Energy Resource Ltd., and Northern and Central Gas Corp. He sees universities as a business which isn't cost-efficient and the product it produces is not yet modified enough to business and industry which "has a vested interest in the people who graduate from our universities." When a cost analysis is done, Bovey states "The university as an entity is no different than business or industry". University can be seen as a machine of inputs and outputs, hence he says "There may be areas of over-production—if we can call it that—and there are areas of under-production". Students become like workers in a large factory and accessibility becomes a dark subject when Bovey states "Is there a way we can somehow regulate the supply of people going into various professions?"

Bovey uses ambiguous words like "improve" and "quality" without ever approaching the question of underfunding except to state the "I'm not

The Bovey Commission, Bette Stephenson, underfunding. A strange triangle of confusion. A public trial: the crown as Bette Stephenson directing the state prosecutor, Edmund Bovey, to try the Ontario university system, en masse. A secretive logic understood by only a few well-placed officials is the prosecutor's case. The evidence is obvious: the poor state of the universities. The victims, the students, wander from room to room wondering where the trial is and what exactly are the charges. This could be a Kafka novel, but it's not.

by Rick Wallace

Most know of the three men Bovey Commission for the Future Development of the Universities of Ontario as the executioner of Minister of Education Bette Stephenson's 'blueprint' for the 'reshaping' of Ontario universities. Their task is to precisely determine how to restructure universities within a decreasing allotment of funding. Two questions stand out amidst the confusion. One, how was it determined, and one what grounds, that the Ontario universities should be so drastically altered, and secondly, what are the consequences for us as students?

Three factors emerge: the decline in the level of funding, the increase in enrolment, a declining priority by the provincial government to maintain the diversity and accessibility of university programs. The growth in attendance at Ontario universities has increased by more than 600% since 1960. Currently, 180,000 students attend full-time and another 100,000 part-time. Since 1972, the number of women attending has risen by 80% over previous numbers. Moreover, there was a large increase in the number of people taking advantage of part-time studies. Nevertheless, the provincial operating grants per student have declined drastically. Ontario currently spends about $4500 per student or $100 per capita. The other provinces spend an average of $6100 per student or about $135 per capita. This is a sharp decrease in provincial funding per student over a decade before. Ten years before, the Ontario government spent $5700 per student. The present figure of $4500 is a 25% reduction per student. Consequently, Ontario spends less per university than any other province, less than Newfoundland, less than P.E.I.. In total, Ontario spent $1.1 billion in '83-'84 on the universities or less than $300 a year on behalf of the average taxpayer in Ontario. (It is only half the amount of $2 billion we spend annually on servicing Hydro's $19 billion debt.) The low priority of funding for

American Classic at Shakespearean Festival

by Judy Hahn

For the past several years, the summer festival in Stratford, Ontario has put less emphasis on Shakespeare. In their literature, you no longer find references to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival but quite simply to the Stratford Festival.

Among the festival's billings, Gilbert and Sullivan have been represented for their fourth year in a row and American classics are also more important. Last year it was Death of a Salesman and this year, until October 27, you can see Tennessee Williams' A Streetcar Named Desire.

As for most Stratford productions, the acting, the set and costumes are all exceptional. Rosemary Dunsmore plays a personal favorite, conveying well the easy-going yet strong character of Stella Kowalski. The audience was equally appreciative of Patricia Connolly as the disturbed Blanche Dubois, William Petersen as Stanley Kowalski and of Les Carlson as Mitch (Harold Mitchell).

The play, set in working class New Orleans on a hot summer day, has always known considerable success for its own merits. However, like the film and other productions, Stratford's production has its weaknesses. There is a general lack of tension.

The audience does not feel the heavy heat of a New Orleans summer. No one really seemed to sweat except Mitch. Stanley, in particular always appeared fresh. He is also a little too likeable, which is a consequential failing since much of the conflict in the play is between himself and Blanche, or between himself and his wife.

Blanche's southern accent is slightly inconsistent, but she otherwise gives a strong performance in a difficult role. One feels much more uncomfortable with the character itself than with the performance.

Newcomer to Stratford, Ralph Funicello, set designer of A Streetcar Named Desire, proved himself with the authentic yet imaginative stage. The costuming by Debra Hanson is likewise fine due to its credibility.

"LES GARS" : LA MORT DU MACHO

par Claude Filteau

Un fond de cour de maison de banlieue, avec B.B.Q., parasol et piscine (une vraie, avec de l'eau): tel est le cadre de "Les gars", une pièce de l'auteur québécois Jean Barbeau.

Trois voisins se retrouvent un vendredi soir après le travail et décident, un peu malgré eux, de passer la soirée entre hommes; leurs compagnes se sont, en effet, absentes pour une raison ou pour une autre. A travers leurs dialogues, au langage coloré, ils se révèlent peu à peu à nous. Sous leur croûte "macho" plus ou moins épaisse, le spectateur découvre leurs craintes, leurs angoisses, leur vulnérabilité.

Gustave (Gus) est un vendeur de portes et châssis sans grande éducation, aux opinions simples et bien arrêtées. Malgré son peu de raffinement (surtout du point de vue de son langage, avis aux chastes oreilles), c'est un personnage que son grand cœur rend attachant. Henri Dumas, travailleur social, père et époux dévoué, est un homme délirant, passionné et sensible qui a pourtant toujours refoulé ses émotions. Robert (Bob) Guérin est un intellectuel libéré des contraintes sociales; il vit en "union libre" avec sa compagne. Mais en dépit de son éducation et de ses idées d'avant-garde, il n'en est pas moins esclave de l'idéal masculin que son éducation a ancré en lui.

Dans la pièce, les trois compères arrivent en même temps à un carrefour important dans leurs relations avec leurs compagnes. En effet, chacun réalise l'un après l'autre que sa "tendre moitié" a changé dans ses attentes et ses exigences de la vie de couple; ou que, du moins, elle les affirme plus qu'auparavant. Nos trois bonhommes, acculés au pied du mur, n'ont qu'une porte de sortie: modifier leurs conceptions des rapports hommes-femmes.

"Les gars", c'est essentiellement le revers de la médaille de la Libération de la femme; l'adaptation (parfois ardue) de la gent masculine à la femme nouvelle. Ce que la pièce dénigre, ce ne sont pas les hommes, mais les stéréotypes dont ils sont affligés par leur éducation.

Si vous craignez que ce soit là une pièce didactique, soyez rassurés. Si elle a un message à nous transmettre, c'est d'abord une oeuvre comique de qualité, pleine de surprises (linguistiques, entre autres).

Ay Patria...

Ay cuando... Cuando me encontraré contigo (Pablo Neruda)

par Josée Bornais et Jorge Sierra

A l'occasion de la fête nationale chilienne, le groupe Luti-Illimani a été invité à chanter devant un auditoire majoritairement sud-américain à Toronto.

Luti-Illimani a été formé en 1967 à l'Université technique de Santiago. Le nom Luti-Illimani a des origines Ayamara: "luti" veut dire soleil et "illimani": une montagne près de La Paz.

Les buts de ce groupe sont bien définis. Il se veut le reflet de la culture métisse et autochtone en Amérique latine. Luti-Illimani lutte aussi contre le néo-colonialisme culturel qui s'est répandu en Amérique latine. Le groupe est devenu le porte-parole du peuple chilien qui souffre du manque de démocratie et de liberté dans leur pays.

En effet, on perçoit dans leurs chansons la tristesse d'un peuple chilien prisonnier et sa volonté de se battre jusqu'au bout pour la liberté. Leur répertoire est à la fois de contenu politique et social puisqu'il révèle la situation des paysans et de la classe moyenne en Amérique latine.

Les deux milles spectateurs

qui s'étaient réunis à Kings Circle n'ont pas été déçus par le spectacle. Le groupe a su transmettre ses sentiments à son auditoire.

Aujourd'hui, les membres de Luti-Illimani sont en exil en Italie. Le groupe voyage de par le monde; par leurs chansons ils se font ambassadeurs de la liberté. Il faut aussi mentionner la chaleur latine qui a permis aux Canadiens(ennes) présent(e)s de participer, chanter et sentir la profondeur de leur message. Ce fut un spectacle très enrichissant autant pour les Latino-Américains que pour les Canadiens.

RUSH À TORONTO

par Daniel Morneau

C'est une foule en délire d'environ 15 000 personnes qui a assisté au premier d'une série de 2 concerts du groupe canadien RUSH au Maple Leaf Garden le 21 septembre dernier.

Ayant interrompu sa tournée américaine, RUSH est revenu dans sa ville natale pour débiter le tournage d'un film (LIVE) sur sa tournée: "Grace Under Pressure". Utilisant un écran géant en arrière scène pour la projection de vidéos, ainsi qu'un éclairage de lasers et d'ultra-violets des plus sophistiqués, le groupe torontois a même fait participer le public en leur faisant porter des lunettes 3 dimensions, lors de sa chanson: Weapons.

Précédé par Red Rider en première partie, c'est avec Red Sector A, Distant Early Warning, Tom Sawyer et un solo de batterie pivotante dans l'unique rappel, que Neil Peart, Geddy Lee et Alex Lifeson ont su manipuler une foule âgée entre 18 et 30 ans.

Après cette série de concerts à Toronto, dont le deuxième aura servi aux oeuvres de bienfaisance, RUSH poursuivra sa tournée mondiale au Japon et en Australie pour enfin le terminer en Europe, un périple qui devrait rapporter au-delà des 25 millions de dollars.

She Darkness engulfed her as she danced evenings mist settled in lighting sparkles to her gown.

Keeping pace with sounds of silence gently she swayed with nights tender breeze.

A ghost she was aimlessly wandering caught...in hands of time beckoned...by hands of evil.

She saw a fallen petal of a dying rose a smile
played upon her lips.

Dying rose and beauty fading soon be dead, same as she.

Her laughter
so mysterious rose to the glow of the silvery moon.

Slipping away
through the trees
she bade her garden farewell.

In the light of the stars
now danced the petal...
of the dead rose.

Glendon Volleyball Team

BEST OF RECENT HISTORY

The Glendon Gators

A Name

by Pierre (Hayes) Tremblay

Who are they? Our flag-football team. They started their season Monday Sept. 24th with a convincing 44-0 victory over Founders. Our guys beat Founders in every aspect of the game.

Offensively, led by quarterback Mike Tinscombe, they scored 6 touchdowns and 42 point-conversions. To show you how precise Mike's passes were, only 3 of them were dropped by the receivers. Defensively, our guys were excellent. Founders couldn't go anywhere. However, the Big-D had to give everything it had to save the shut-out on the last play of the game.

The season is still young but I can say that we have a good team and we will go far.

"GATORS WIN BIG"

by Hugh Mansfield

On Monday Sept. 24th on the North Utility Field at the main campus, the Glendon Gators opened their season with a landslide 36-0 victory over Founders College.

The offence immediately took charge on their first possession scoring on a 25 yard TD pass from QB Mike Tinscombe to Martin Duck. The offence never looked back. By half-time the Gators had amassed a 22-0 lead. Of course, one cannot overlook the outstanding play of a tough Gator defence.

Most notably Pierre Tremblay, who made countless knockdowns and tackles. In the second half, the offence continued to roll with touchdowns to Rob Vidi and a sensational pass and run TD to Dave "Gazelle" Tenaglia. Be sure to watch the Gators at their next game.

really in a position to say whether they (universities) are cash starved or not...."

The effect of all this on students is the distinct possibility of increasing tuitions with some administrations recommending increases of 50% to 180%, and replacing any OSAP grants with an all-loan system. Program availability would become more limited by offering fewer courses and fewer places to study them. This problem is already being raised with York University adopting a typical attitude of reducing its first year class by 200 students even though applications increased by 14% to 16%. 424 people this year. Moreover, applications would not be considered unless students had at least 70% in six

Sept. 25th showed the Glendon Intercollege Coed Torch Volleyball team to their best placing of recent history. In a competition always dominated by the Alumni team, Glendon came out in second place. At the end of the round robin section of the tournament, Glendon was in third place; but after two hard-fought 16-14 wins over Stong College in the semi-finals, the team made the finals. The two wins over Stong were noteworthy because Glendon had to come back from deficits of 14-8 and 14-10 in the two games. In the finals, the undefeated Alumni team won both games 15-4 and 15-10 but commented that Glendon was the only team to make them work. Many great rallies took place with both teams blocking and spiking.

Another first for Glendon was the presence of an Open Competitive League Team. This team also handled itself admirably. The team came through the round robin in second place but was beaten by a stubborn Founders team in the semi's. In the consolation finals against Winter's, the team won two cliff-hangers 16-14 and 18-16 to take third place overall.

It was an outstanding job by both teams. The preparation for the women's team is next. Intramural and preparation for future play is on Wednesday from 7 to 9 pm and on Saturday from 1 to 3 at the Field House. Everybody is welcome; so please come.

DU SOCCER HORS CONCOURS

par Daniel Morneau

Le premier match hors concours de l'équipe de soccer du Collège Glendon s'est terminé en faveur de celui-ci, le mercredi 19 septembre dernier, au Mississauga Field. En effet, les hommes de John Figueiredo se sont permis 2 buts en 2e demie, pour finalement l'emporter 3-2 sur le Collège Erindale. (U. of T.)

2 buts rapides

A la mi-temps, alors que le pointage indiquait 2-1 en faveur de leurs adversaires, les Glendonniens sont parvenus à remonter la pente grâce aux marques enregistrées respectivement par Dave Gibson et Rob Najn.

Dépourvu d'hommes-clefs

Bien que dépourvu de 5 joueurs-clefs, Glendon a su profiter des bévues et de la malchance de leurs adversaires pour enfin remporter la palme. Pas moins de cinq fois dans la partie, Erindale a touché la barre horizontale. Leur attaque étant plus puissante que celle des joueurs de Glendon, ils ont pris les devants pendant la première demie, dominant nettement le jeu de leurs adversaires. Le pointage aurait pu être beaucoup plus élevé, n'eût été de la belle performance du gardien glendonien Joe Alberti. L'autre but de Glendon a été l'oeuvre de Paul Kipp, qui s'est illustré à la cinquième minute du premier vingt. Ce but a permis à son équipe d'avoir l'avantage à la marque.

Mentionnons que Glendon disputera six parties en saison régulière, trois sur notre campus et trois autres à l'extérieur, avant d'entamer les éliminatoires, un objectif que John Figueiredo s'est juré d'atteindre!!!

CROSS-COUNTRY A GLENDON

par Pierre Tremblay

Mardi le 25 septembre, un événement majeur a eu lieu au pavillon des sports Proctor. En effet, tous les collèges affiliés à York se sont réunis dans le cadre de la compétition intercollégiale de cross-country. 15 participantes chez les femmes, 31 chez les hommes ont parcouru des trajets de 3,2 et 5,5 km. Cathy Thompson a été la meilleure des nôtres chez les femmes avec une troisième position. Chez les hommes, Pierre Tremblay et Michel Gouin ont bien fait avec respectivement une troisième et douzième position. Cette compétition faisant partie de la ligue Torche, chaque collège recevait des points pour son classement par équipe. Malheureusement pour Glendon, un manque de coureurs nous enleva toutes chances de nous classer. Félicitations aux coureurs et coureuses ainsi qu'aux organisateurs pour leur bon travail.

Grade 13 courses.

It is forecast that at current trends of higher grade cut-off levels and decreasing university budgets, a minimum of 50,000 qualified Ontario people will not be accepted into university between now and 1994. Consequently, thousands of young people will be denied the opportunity to attend university after graduating from high school. Those who will also be seriously affected are mature students, those attending part-time while working or raising a family, and people wanting to return to their studies. They, or possibly us, may find that the courses they want are no longer offered at a university near them, or they may already be filled. In sum, a storming of the bastille might be in order.
